

B

ACK IN THE TIME

when animals could talk with one another, Skunk was the size of an elephant. He was the biggest animal in the forest and had many friends. He was the only black and white animal there and never bothered anyone, eating only berries and greens.

One day, though, Fox grew tired of his own pretty red and white coat and proceeded to ask the Medicine Man to help him change the color of his fur. Medicine Man told Fox that the color he had was the color he must keep for this is what ABA' BINNI'LI' gave him. But the more Fox saw Skunk's beautiful and shiny black and white coat, the more he wanted it for himself.

HOPAAKIKASH

nannimihlha' alhihaat hooittimanopolinattook, Koniāt ishtokā issoba haksibish patha' onattook.

Nannimihlha' itti' anonka' aaáyya'sha ishto' ímmayyattook micha inkāna' ilawattook. Ilapakoot losacha tohbittook micha kano apistikili ki'yokitok. Pilaat bissa' micha nanna okchamali' apattook.

Nittak chaffakat Chola'at ihakshop homma micha tohbi' chokm'asika ikayyokpánchokitok. Alikchi' imasilhha apila'nika nannaka ihakshop ilachi pisaka.

